D1: US 2001003983 A1

D2: US 5317997 A

D3: US 4475487 A

Explanation:

The claimed invention relates to a portable working machine. The purpose of the invention is to provide a machine with improved available space for components in the machine unit so the components can be given the appropriate design and shape.

Claim 1:

D1 discloses a portable engine cutter comprising a disc cutter 12, a main body 20 comprising a cover case 21, and a belt driving mechanism 60 between the disc cutter and the main body. The main body, which can be said to correspond to the machine unit in claim 1 of the application, includes a combustion engine 30; handles 23, 24; and a throttle trigger 22. As can be understood from fig. 1 the lower parts of the handles 23, 24 can serve as supports for the engine cutter. The internal combustion engine 30 is provided with a fuel feeding device 100 consisting of an air cleaner, a carburettor etc., and is disposed inside the cover case in such a manner that it is erected almost vertically but slightly inclined forwardly (see paragraph 23 and fig. 1). When looking at fig. 1 in D1 one can see that the characterising part of claim 1 in the application is known from D1.

Continuation of: BOX V

The machine defined in claim 1 of the application differs from D1 in that it comprises a muffler. D1 does not appear to mention anything about a muffler.

The use of a muffler has the effect of reducing noise.

The person skilled in the art is thus faced with the problem of modifying the engine cutter in D1 so noise is reduced.

It is well known in the art to provide portable working machines with a muffler in order to reduce noise. In this context reference is also made to page I., lines 19-20 of your application. The person skilled in the art would therefore instantly realise that noise will be reduced if the engine cutter in D1 is provided with a muffler.

Reference is also made to D2 (see fig. 2 and column 1, lines 5-7 and column 2, line 25-column 4, line 21) and D3 (see fig. 1 and column 2, lines 37-56). D2 discloses a chain saw with a cylinder that is inclined forwardly. It also comprises a muffler 49 etc.. D3 discloses a further example of a chain saw comprising two cylinders having a common axis that extend in the longitudinal direction of the machine frame at a slight forward upward inclination. Claim 1 of the application differs from D2 and D3 in that the tool unit is a circular, disc-shaped tool. The person skilled in the art would realise that the known machine in D2 can be modified to have a circular, disc-shaped tool instead of a chain on a guide bar. Thus, the subject matter claimed in claim 1 lacks inventive step over any of D1-D3.

Claims 2-11, 23, 27-29:

Claims 2-11, 23 and 27-29 appear to define a working machine that the person skilled in the art would arrive at, in light of for instance D1, without undue experimentation.

These claims are therefore considered to lack inventive step.

Box No. VII Certain defects in the international application

The following defects in the form or contents of the international application have been noted:

Claim 24 discusses a protruding muffler part in a defined form. The first time it is mentioned that the muffler protrudes is in claim 22. The connection of claim 24 to superior claims therefore appears to be wrong. The right connection of claim 24 is believed to be according to claim 22.
